their friend Rebecca Rabbit. In the evening, they gather to eat pancakes for dinner at 6 pm. Finally, at 7 pm, Peppa and George brush their teeth before heading off to bed at 8 pm.

I recommend this book because:

I recommend this book because it features a simple and relatable storyline that keeps children interested and entertained, while introducing basic concepts like daily routines and social interactions essential for early childhood development. The narrative emphasises the joy found in everyday activities, making it relatable for young children who are beginning to understand their own daily schedules. Additionally, each left-hand page includes a drawing of a clock indicating the time of Peppa's current activity, along with instructions to teach children about the positions of the big hand and the little hand. Most importantly, the book includes a movable clock that allows children to turn the clock hands as they read, enabling them to engage with the narrative while learning about time.
