

Book Title: The Things I Love About Grandparents

Author: Trace Moroney

Publisher: Smart Kids Investment Co Ltd

Story Content:

This heartwarming picture book follows a young bunny who shares all the special things he loves about his grandparents. It describes everyday activities he enjoys with his maternal grandparents, such as knitting, dressing up in old clothes and jewellery, baking cookies, and sharing stories. As they grow older, they find it harder to do some of the simple things they love, like gardening. This gentle observation introduces children to the concept of ageing in a sensitive and relatable way. His paternal grandparents live far away, but the bunny stays connected with them by talking on the phone and sending letters and photos. He enjoys sharing his life with them. Throughout the story, the bunny expresses how his grandparents make him feel happy, secure, and loved. The story ends with the bunny showing deep appreciation and love for both sets of grandparents, highlighting how important they are in his life.

I recommend this book because...

It shows how children can build strong bonds with both maternal and paternal grandparents. It gently introduces the concept of ageing and how it affects loved ones. This helps young readers understand that as grandparents grow older, they may not be able to do everything they once could. This is a valuable lesson in empathy and care. Additionally, it highlights how love and connection can remain strong despite physical distance, as seen in the bunny's relationship with his paternal grandparents through phone calls and letters. Most importantly, the book encourages children to recognise, express, and cherish the love, support, and wisdom their grandparents provide, fostering a deeper sense of gratitude and emotional awareness.
